

Medical startup offers lab services at home

16 March 2018 | News

The time-saving facility brings transparency in medical testing and creates a level playing field in laboratory testing.

Startup firm Pick2heal, headquartered at Kerala Start up Mission (KSUM) in Technopark at Thiruvananthapuram, has come out with a mobile application that makes medical laboratory tests cost-effective and brings a wide range of lab services to the doorsteps of the patients.

Through the website, patients can select a list of labs that conduct the tests along with prices and an option to book the test at special rates.

The time-saving facility brings transparency in medical testing and creates a level playing field in laboratory testing. The platform allows the patients to access the test report from anywhere at any time and can be useful as an online repository for the same.

Pick2heal has also tied up with diagnostic labs to offer discounts on tests booked through their website/app